

Remembering someone

To help your child cope with situations involving grieving and loss

You will need:

Draw, write or make a collage of memories and times spent together with the person who has died. You could take this to the cemetery if you want.

You can adapt this activity when your child has to cope with other significant losses – a friend moving away, a pet dying.